The first family is from the village of Halabja, which was gassed by Saddam Hussein's regime in 1988. The second family is from the city of Afrin, which was occupied by Turkish forces in 2018. The third family is from the refugee camp of Domiz, where they fled to escape the violence in Iraq.

Through the stories of these families, we learn about the resilience and strength of the Kurdish people. We also learn about the horrors that they have endured, and the ongoing challenges that they face.

Kurds in Dark Times is a must-read for anyone interested in the Kurdish people or the history of the Middle East. It is a powerful and heartbreaking story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
