A Journey Through Colour

India is a country of colours. From the bright saris worn by women to the colourful spices that fill the markets, India is a feast for the eyes. MacDonald captures this vibrancy in her writing, describing the "kaleidoscope of colours" that she sees everywhere she goes.

She writes about the "saffron-coloured robes of saffron-robed sadhus" in Rishikesh, the "emerald-green waters" of the backwaters of Kerala, and the "golden sands" of the beaches of Goa. MacDonald's descriptions are so vivid that you can almost see and feel the colours of India yourself.

A Rich Culture

India is also a country of rich culture. From the ancient temples of Tamil Nadu to the bustling markets of Delhi, India is a country where tradition and modernity coexist. MacDonald explores this culture in her book, sharing her experiences of festivals, weddings, and religious ceremonies.

She writes about the "pulsating energy" of the Diwali festival in Mumbai, the "sacred rituals" of a Hindu wedding in Varanasi, and the "serene beauty" of the Taj Mahal. MacDonald's writing gives you a glimpse into the heart and soul of India.

Delicious Food

And of course, no trip to India would be complete without sampling the delicious food. India is a culinary paradise, with a wide variety of dishes to choose from. MacDonald shares her experiences of eating street food in Delhi, cooking traditional dishes in a village in Rajasthan, and dining in some of India's finest restaurants.

She writes about the "explosion of flavours" in a plate of biryani, the "richness" of a curry, and the "sweetness" of a lassi. MacDonald's descriptions will make your mouth water and leave you craving for more.
