Delve into the Depths of South Africa's Past and Present

Prepare to embark on a transformative literary journey as renowned playwright Yael Farber unveils three poignant and thought-provoking testimonial plays that shed light on the intricate tapestry of South Africa's past and present.

Unveiling Hidden Truths

Farber's plays meticulously weave together the raw and unfiltered testimonies of individuals who have lived through the tumultuous events that shaped South Africa. These plays serve as a powerful platform for marginalized voices to share their experiences, giving a human face to the often-overlooked narratives of oppression, trauma, and resilience.

Trilogy of Triumph

The trilogy of plays encompasses:

- Molora: A gripping exploration of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, where victims and perpetrators confront the legacy of apartheid.
- Mies Julie: A modern retelling of Strindberg's classic, set against the backdrop of post-apartheid South Africa, examining the complexities of race, gender, and power.
- The Crucible: Arthur Miller's timeless allegory, adapted to reflect the witch hunts and moral dilemmas that continue to plague South African society.

A Testament to Resilience

Through these plays, Farber celebrates the indomitable spirit of South Africans who have endured adversity. She gives voice to their struggles, their pain, and their unwavering hope. By witnessing these powerful stories, we gain a deeper understanding of the challenges and triumphs of this remarkable nation.

Masterful Storytelling

Farber's writing is characterized by its raw emotion, lyrical language, and intricate structure. She deftly blends realism and symbolism to create a multi-layered theatrical experience that resonates long after the curtain falls.
